
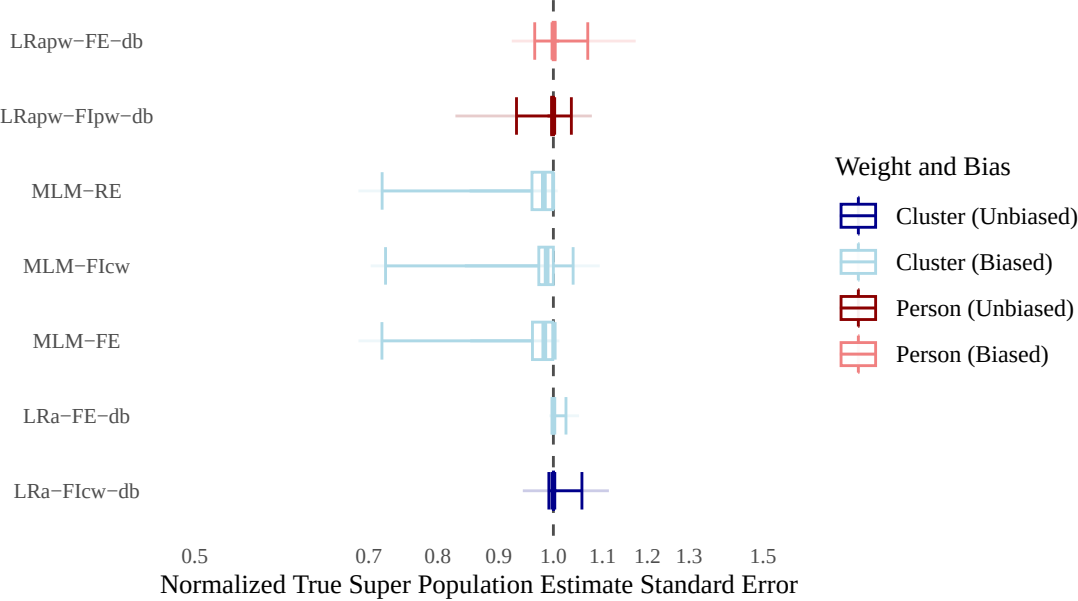

Figure 3: Boxplot of normalized estimate true standard errors across the different scenarios by method. The normalized true standard error is the true standard error for a given method divided by the median true standard error across methods within a given simulation scenario. Therefore each data point is adjusted for the underlying base true standard error from a given set of DGPs and represents the true standard error driven by the estimation method.